Introduction of Surat Thani

Surat Thani (Thai: สุราษฎร์ธานี, pronounced [sù.rá:t tʰā:.nā:]), often called "Surat" in short, is the largest of Southern provinces of Thailand. Surat Thani means "City of Good People" where located 685 kilometers from Bangkok. Surat Thani was the formal capital of the Srivijaya Empire, it covers an area of approximately 12,981 square kilometers. Neighbouring provinces are (from north, clockwise) Chumphon, Nakhon Si Thammarat, Krabi, Phang Nga and Ranong.

The numerous islands along the coast make Surat Thani a perfect hideaway for travelers from around the world. The ideal destination for many is Ko Samui, Thailand's third largest island, and its neighbor Ko Pha-ngan a celebrated island that hosts the biggest beach full moon party. North of Ko Pha-ngan is Ko Tao, renowned for its excellent coral reefs. To top it all is the dazzling 250-square-kilometer Ang Thong Marine National Park, where a stunning archipelago await to greet the visitors with their charming palm-fringed beaches, crystal clear water and colorful coral reefs. The best time to enjoy one of these islands to the fullest is from April to November.
